

For the final project I'm hoping to create a web page for a fantastic French animated adventure/crime film, 'A Cat in Paris'. The film was made by the French animation studio Folimage, and tells the story of a young Parisian girl whose cat leads her to discovery and unravel a crime mystery over the course of a single night. The film also received an academy award nomination for best animated feature.

As of right now, I plan on using voting buttons to let users vote for their favorite studio Folimage film, event listeners to simulate user-logins, and to show/hide content on the page like additional images, and character bios. I'll also have a validation form to allow fans to sign up for a simulated newsletter sign-up.

With respect to third-party API libraries, I'll be using jQuery, Bootstrap (I'll have to start learning this one), and probably Twitter or Flickr, I haven't decided on which one yet. I'm leaning towards Flickr so I can use it to incorporate additional images, and fan made art into the images section in addition to official press images.
